An Artist Impression of the new sculpture 'Sway'

The new park will also be home to a stunning piece of artwork being created by artist Loreenna Grant.

Loreenna has developed all of the public art for Tuart Ridge, and is producing something equally special for the new Treetops park.

"I really wanted to do something that was colourful and created a sense of nature," Loreenna said.

"I have used some of Western Australia's wildflowers as my inspiration and created a piece of art that I hope will look perfectly at home in the new landscaped parkland."

The artwork, called 'Sway', consists of a number of colourful, 3.5m tall steel and stainless steel mesh 'flowers'. Designed with curves and natural lines to create a sense of movement, the petals of the flowers will be semi-transparent, to allow light to filter through and enhance the colours.

'Sway' is due to be installed in the new park by late September.
